Postal Meltdown - 30th May to 6th June Please make sure you read this carefully. Last week I had a major postal meltdown. >From Friday 30th May to Thursday 5th June the Royal Mail simply failed to deliver my PO Box contents (for which they get paid £120 to deliver it daily). The postmen on rounds said it was in the sorting office, the sorting office said postmen on rounds had it. As a consequence I delayed running turns until it had arrived because a number (there's no way of telling how many) of postal turns were bound to be outstanding. On Friday 6th June I collected a bunch of PO Box post, and therefore decided to crack on with running games because on the flip-side, the vasy majority were wondering where their turns were, and pestering me about them.

On Saturday 7th June (when they frequently don't deliver it anyway) I got over twenty sets of late orders. That's appalling.

I'm absolutely livid about that. It's frustrating when you get results later than expected, but that's never the end of the world, but there's nothing worse with these games than spending hours planning your orders and then finding they've not gone through (it might be mitigated somewhat if the results go well, but that's not the point). I advise if you do use the post to allow three days for first class mail to arrive, and if you leave it later than that, then you're taking a risk I hope you accept, but this wasn't the case here - you have every right to be shoving stuff in post box on Friday and expecting to arrive within a week!

Most of the Bromley Sorting Office quite frankly don't seem to give a monkeys. Either they don't care, or it's Somebody Elses Problem. Speaking to various people (and quite a few have had their ears bent by me) I got a mixture of "what can you do" and "it'll only get worse". Not exactly promising for the future.....

Compensation and Goodwill It's not generally my practice to rerun turns - that opens up whole new cans of worms, so as I've always done, once games have been run, if orders haven't arrived, I'm afraid there's nothing that can be done to fix that. However, this situation is so exceptional that I've decided to add a goodwill credit to all those whose turns arrived late. I've hinted (strongly) to the Royal Mail that they should refund it to me, I'm not holding my breath. But I've got to run a business, and keep as many customers as possible, and I think it's simply unfair that a bunch of loyal long-standing people should have to pay for such a shoddy service, even though the cause is something I've no control over. But please be aware it's a one-off, because it isn't something I can afford to do again. Everyone needs to take this as their warning.

The Future - Posting Orders I can't reiterate this strongly enough. If you can send orders via the Internet, that's the best way. It's 99.999% reliable, you don't need a printer, indeed you can do it from a mate's computer, a library, an internet cafe. One of the guys affected last week rang me up on Monday and described himself as an "email virgin" and yet he was up and running and sending me orders within half an hour. It really is very straightforward.

If you really don't have internet access, and have to rely on the post, then please post as early as you can. Three days ought to still be perfectly viable, but we are dealing with Bromley Sorting Office. I know that's no ideal, and I don't want to put you off, but you ought to know how it is. Though please note the paragraph below.

Alternative Address One thing that has been made clear is that the biggest problem is the PO Box department at Bromley

Sorting Office. Throughout all of this time, I've had daily deliveries of my normal post (bills, bank statements, junk mail). It's just the PO Box staff haven't bothered doing their bit (I can't repeat what one postman said about them!).

So as a consequence, until further notice, I'd recommend that rather than addressing orders to my PO Box, you use my "direct address" for orders. It doesn't take Bromley Sorting Office out of the loop, but it does remove the PO Box people.

Danny McConnell, 49 Westpoint, Shortlands Grove, Bromley, Kent, BR2 0ND

If you use the PO Box address, don't worry. That'll still get delivered as I'm not going to cancel it any time soon (one of the reasons to use a PO Box is that if I move, I can leave the address for you guys unchanged).

Summary I hope I've covered everything, in what is indeed a long rantette. I think it's important that postal players are still able to participate in our games (all of us want as many live players as possible) but the more of this stuff that can be done via the Internet and Email the better. The majority of you do already, and the more that can the better.

Deadlines and Processing All of the above gets me to thinking about deadlines and processing. At present I wait for the post to arrive before processing turns. Back in the 1990's when that was between 9am and 10am that was a no-brainer but nowadays the post arrives between midday and 1pm. Which then means a scramble to get games run, often waiting for a handful (or less) of last minute posted orders (the vast majority submit via the Internet, and the majority of the rest don't wait until the last minute anyway). I'm beginning to wonder whether it's simply better to wait until 9am, and then start running. For postal players it'd mean you've got to discipline yourselves to make sure orders arrive "the day before", or get around to using the Internet anyway. What it would mean is results generally going out a few hours earlier, which for internet players might mean getting them before you leave work, and for postal players a higher chance of the Snail getting them to you next day. Comments are welcome.

Late Email Results If you think results are late, please make sure you wait until the following morning before chasing up results. First step is to check out the Latest News at www.pbmsports.com - if I am running late I'll post a notice there. Please don't chase me up because you know your mate got his half an hour ago, because whilst most emails are "instant", often they do get delayed for a few hours and it does take a while to send them all out (I spread them out to avoid triggering firewalls).

Equally however, if it's the next morning and you've not had results, and there's nothing on www.pbmsports.com saying I've had a problem, then please chase me up. If it hasn't shown 12 hours later, odds are it won't, and probably some firewall or spam filter somewhere has gobbled it (and they do appear to do so without pattern). I'd rather you ended up with two copies than none.

PDF Reports Emailed game reports are available for all games here. The standard format is a PDF file - Adobe Reader is free to download (see www.pbmsports.com for a link) and you can open your reports with one click of the mouse and you can either view them on screen, or print them as you wish. You don't need to worry about formatting or printer drivers. The text format for reports is available but I only expect people will want to do so if they use the text file for other purposes (such as exporting the listings into software produced yourself). If you've not tried email reports before, try them out - it really is very easy.
