Version 4.4 You should find an update enclosed/available on the website. Most of the Version 4.4 Update is unchanged from the Version 4.3 newsletter I was issuing last time but there are some adjustments (at the end) concerning free agents.

Baseball Recession Buster Until the end of January I'm running an offer on Gameplan Baseball. If you want to take on a new standby position then I'll transfer credits from an existing team (or a new payment) at a rate of two for one. After that they're non-transferable (so you can't double some credits and then move them back!) and it's a maximum of 20 credits (converted to 40).

If you want to specify a couple of leagues you're interested in that's fine, I'll send you out roundups and you can give me some preferences, and hopefully it'll mean a few more teams being run by live players, and perhaps also help out a few of those for whom things are tight, but maybe have a few quid to spend following on from Christmas.

Version 4.4 - Waived Players One of the changes I'd made in the recent update, which I'd assumed was innocuous was that any player who was waived, with zero potential, automatically announced his intention to retire. Previously this had only applied to those with experience of more than 12, and I wasn't aware it was a big deal.

Unbeknownst to me, it's actually been quite a key decision for lots of you - veterans with 12 or less experience you might risk on the market, trying to reduce their value and resign them, whereas 13+ you'd either wave bye-bye to them, or hang onto them.

For the games that ran last week (MLB1, 2, 4, 7 and 21) there was further confusion. I set the software to re-assess those affected by the change (ie players of experience 12 and below) but some people thought it was going to apply to all free agents, which meant some players retired people weren't expecting, causing some consternation. The good news is that this is easily fixed.

The position is now as follows:-

1a. MLB3 and MLB8 should be unaffected, because no-one has yet been zapped from the free agent list under the "new system".

1b. MLB5 and MLB6 should be unaffected, as the change/problem identified above was corrected before their last turn.

1c. MLB1, MLB2, MLB4, MLB7 and MLB21 have seen some veterans "zapped", following up their threats of retirement when coaches didn't expect them to retire (and would have resigned them had they known). If that affected you, please contact me as soon as possible - I'll return the player to your roster (on your draft squad, so you can't do anything useful without PROMOTING/RELEASING him) and you pay half of his LP Value. Then you can waive him again, and the system will process it "normally".

2. For this turn ONLY, ALL players flagged with a "+" will be reprieved (their "+" deleted) and instead they will make a fresh decision about retirement. That might mean they re-appear with a "+" (they've gone away and thought about it, and yes, they're packing in), or it might take a few turns. Suffice to say, none will retire this turn (unless overwritten by a waived player, see rule 8.4 - a player with no potential may retire automatically to make space for a waived player - if you have a player retire this turn because of this, and you didn't think/want him to do so - please contact me immediately) and the list at the end of this turn will be "clean" - if it says a player is going to retire at the end of next turn, he will retire.

3. Under the 2005 rules, the status quo will remain, so a player of 13 or more experience will announce his intention to retire immediately, and those with 12 and below run the normal gauntlet (which does include a chance of immediately deciding to retire).

4. Under the 2009 rules (so you've all got a season's warning) when a player is waived, if he's on zero potential, then he'll have a chance of deciding to flag his immediate retirement. This chance will be random, but weighted according to his experience (the rationale being the older he is, the less likely he is to bother looking for a new club, and is therefore more likely to announce his retirement). If he doesn't flag his immediate retirement, then he'll go into the current system, though typically he'll hang around on the list for 1-2 turns less than non zero players (that aspect is actually already there).

Of course, you can still resign a player who flags "immediate" retirement, you just don't get his value dropping, so you end up paying the same amount.

The current 12/13 system simply doesn't reflect real-life. When a player is coming to the end of his career, we know there are some who "want to go out at the top" and they'll simply retire at the end of a contract, often with the club allowing them to claim it was the player's decision (behind the scenes the club have told him he's going, but no-one makes it public). Equally, there are players who "want to play as long as they can", so they'll look for another year, and are prepared to take a lower wage, though how much lower is a personal decision.

That's why I think there should be a random factor for all players. "He will. He won't" isn't realistic, and whilst perhaps it makes things easier for decision making, I think it's good to have a bit of uncertainty and decision making.
